The invitation to the new worlds of the picture book exploring two worlds, music of Vivaldi's 'Four Seasons-Summer' Ⅰ, Ⅱ, Ⅲ and a memory of playing with the water on summer.

The best book which includes every technique that has been used in previous Suzy Lee's books. 'Four seasons' have Ⅰ, Ⅱ, Ⅲ movements for each season, and she followed the format as it is. So the picture book is divided into three movements as well, and expresses the story of the music by using various materials and techniques, Collage & Crayon, Lines & Dots, Thin coloring & Acrylic Paint so that each movement changes its scenes and looks.
And it has reinterpretation of the sonnet written by Vivaldi at the beginning of each chapter as if it's a child's tone or as if it' s written in a child's diary but after a short paragraph, the story unfolds only by the power of illustrations until the end.
Furthermore, the book begins with a stage and the performers enter the scene and it starts. And the curtain opens in the middle and the children start to play.

LEAVE IT TO MR. OH! NEW

Look Inside

by Lee So-young
Age 3+ | 44 pages | 220x290mm
November 2023
ISBN 978-89-491-0262-7

The book addresses the seriousness of environmental pollution and global warming issues with black humor.

Because of global warming, various animals are suffering; Bears can't hibernate, white owls can't hunt because their feathers turn brown due to melting Arctic snow, and whales are hungry because of a lack of krill.
They come to visit Mr. Oh!, who can solve all problems. However, his solutions are only temporary, for example, giving sleeping pills, dyeing the feather, and giving out oxygen tanks to the krill.
Mr. Oh! describes people who overlook the destruction of the Earth's environment, and the author raises the question to the reader 'what we really need to do for the environment.'

Lee So-young creates picture books and paints in Korea and France. Through BEYOND THE SHADOWS, she won Bologna Book Fair illustrator of the year in 2014. BLUE EYE IAN was nominated for IBBY's Outstanding Book for Young People with Disabilities in 2018, CHIMNEY GHOSTS was nominated for BIB's Korean Entry in 2019. MEPHISTO: STORY OF THE BLACK DOG

by Luly
Age 7+ | 120 pages | 188x246mm
April 2023 | ISBN 978-89-491-0831-5

A unique story lies somewhere between a picture book and a graphic novel, about the friendship of a girl and a demon Mephisto.

A demon shunned in the divine world, Mephisto descends to the earth and wanders alone before transforming himself into a black dog and approaching a girl who is even more lonesome and unfortunate. Recognizing that they could assuage each other's loneliness, the black dog and the girl quickly become close. However, the cursed black dog, which cannot grow older because it is a demon, must watch the girl grow old alone. In her old age, she gets sick and starts losing her memories. For each other's sake, the two friends make one last deal with God.

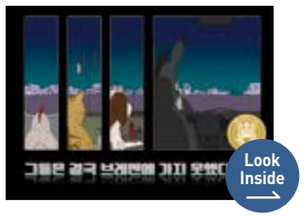
THEY COULDN'T MAKE IT TO BREMEN AFTER ALL



by Luly
Age 4+ | 52 pages | 295x215mm
November 2020 | ISBN 978-89-491-0254-2

Witty literary work focusing on social issues by dramatizing 'Town Musicians of Bremen' interestingly.

All characters in this book, including a donkey fired due to his old age, a cat fired because of his scary appearance, a chicken who got kicked out of the street, and a dog who lost his job because of bankrupted shop, lost their ways for different reasons. They all met together in the subway by accident and stopped in front of the house where thieves stayed. The thieves were surprised by the animals' stories. "So, you mean, you guys are left with nothing to do, even after trying so hard. It's no use trying hard, then." Animals and thieves collected all the left food and dishes and made kimchi stew. And they imagined. What if… what if they gathered together and opened a kimchi stew restaurant together?

VEGETABLE GARDEN DIARY

by Baek Eun-hee
Age 3+ | 48 pages | 225x245mm
February 2024 | ISBN 978-89-491-0263-4

A heartwarming picture book that beautifully captures the four seasons of a family's vegetable garden.

Alongside their parents, the children work on a small plot of land on a weekend farm. They take care of tasks like tilling the soil, planting seeds, watering sprouts, catching worms, and patiently nurturing the plants until they bear fruit. This careful process strengthens family bonds, bringing them closer together. The book's illustrations showcase the beauty of changing seasons and the growth stages of various crops, providing children with an opportunity to learn more about vegetables which children frequently eat in daily lives.

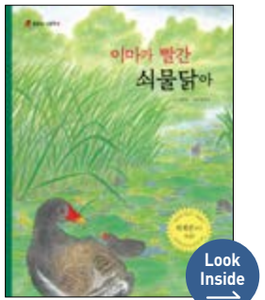
17. THE RED-HEADED COMMON NEW



Here's the common moorhen, the secretive nest builder leading its chicks in file!

Using fresh wild rice leaves, the common moorhens craft a fortress-like, artfully curved nest to protect their offspring from their natural predators. In this nurturing environment, young common moorhens are nourished with the food their parents provide, swiftly growing into skilled hunters. Despite being the last to hatch, the youngest common moorhen in this story overcomes various challenges, thriving under the vigilant care of its parents. Its survival vividly illustrates the vast embrace of nature and the equal value of all living beings, underlining that human life is no more or less precious than the life of a common moorhen.

I AM BONG-GU YOON NEW

A real clone story—What if a human clone lives among us?

One spring day just as Bong-Gu was getting used to his middle-school uniform, his secret was revealed. This was what he had been afraid of after he found out who he really was in 5th grade. Bong-Gu has no memory of the entire day of April 11th, when he was separated from his mom and elder brother and taken to a laboratory.
Bong-Gu returns from the laboratory after 9 months. Realizing that the government and the research team intend to make his existence secret, Bong-Gu's mom reveals Bong-Gu's identity through the media. It was her final move to appeal to the public, believing that people would see Bong-Gu as a human, not a mere clone.

The newest YA book by Kim Ryeo-ryeong, the writer of『Wandeuk』,『Thorny Confession』, and『Elegant Lies』.

The book is about the fifteen-year-old girl called Yeon-su who has the biggest number of protectors in the Myeongdodan alley. Myeongdodan is an old alley by the beachside in the countryside; however, the town decides to redevelop the area. Yeon-su's mother was a single mom who died after giving birth to her, and Yeon-su was left in the care of her aunt. Her aunt raised her with the help of boyfriend's parents, the owners of Daeheung Market. One day a man who claims to be her father shows up, and Yeonsu ends up facing unhappiness and turmoil that falls suddenly like the downfall of shower. The writer calls this solidarity "the inner skin of affection." One feels shy about expressing it, but this is what lies in the hearts of people who care and watch out for one another. It is a story about this solidarity of a community and overcoming one's painful memories of past and giving one's best to live today.

A story of growing up and learning about death during the funeral of a grandfather.

Young-ook lives with his parents and grandfather. Since the grandfather was such a big trouble maker when he was young, he hasn't earned the family's trust much. For Young-ook, however, the grandfather is a roommate and best friend in the world: Even his notoriously bad breath is nothing to Young-ook. As the grandfather repeatedly says that he is about to die soon like a cried wolf, he is around with no one but Young-ook when he knows the death is really near. His last moment only with Young-ook is a bit lonely. Amid the sad atmosphere, the grandfather's last special "event" that he has prepared for his last moment brings the family into troubles. At the funeral, Young-ook meets a genuine grown-up's life behind the curtain that the young boy has never seen it before.
This book is dedicated to all grandfathers and grandmothers who have lived through a long life, sometimes wonderfully, sometimes ridiculously, sometimes sweetly, and sometimes full of mistakes. It is a book of encouragement for children who will live their lives vigorously through the warm and loving memories of their grandparents.

The laugh-out-loud coming-of-age story of Ilsoo, a lucky boy born on July 7.

This is a story about a lucky boy born on July 7. In an unusual style for a children's book, the story covers not only Ilsoo's childhood but his adulthood into his 30s as well. Needless to say, it's a reflection of the author's own growth as a writer. It's full of humor and sarcasm. This book begins with poop jokes and delivering a message of self-discovery. The writer speaks through Ilsoo. "Stop insisting that merely doing is enough. What's important is that we discover our self-worth".

"Would you like to smell sunshine on my hair?"

Works of Yoo Eun-sil have three common features: first, she takes the children's side; second, she doesn't push for "absolute" development; and third, she does not hide her faith that children grow up in their own pace. She does not make any excuses for adults, either. She only accompanies children closely and side-by-side. The first story in this book, The Girl Who Likes "Too", is about Ji-soo who persistently cuts in conversation and says "me too" to whatever she hears. Hyun-woo, the desk mate of Ji-soo, cannot understand her. After hearing complaints of Hyun-woo, his mother decides to invite Ji-soo. Hyun-woo's mother is confident that she could put Ji-soo in her place. But it turns out Hyun-woo's mother can't put Ji-soo down. To Hyun-woo's mother who has believed she is generous enough to understand any children in the world, Ji-soo says "Do you hate me, too?" And Hyun-woo's mom becomes lost for words.

"Are you sure about that?" A fable that makes readers think about the power of words.

The duck is crazy about stories—so much so that it even spreads false rumors everywhere. One day, its beak comes off. The duck goes around excitedly and tells stories with only its beak. Then one day, the rabbit's painting gets ripped in the forest village. The duck mistakes the field mouse for the culprit and starts spreading words. A work that aptly captures the problem of media conveying the wrong words.

Likely to happen in near future! An exhilarating adventure unfolding in the virtual reality world, Pikiki!

In this thrilling adventure story, Yeji, who leads a double life between virtual and real worlds, meets a mysterious helmet boy. Yeji seeks solace from her tedious life in virtual reality, where she becomes 'Luna' who can do anything only and shakes off the pain, loneliness, and despair she has experienced in her daily life. Soon, she creates a monster named Pumkin Man. As a result, the virtual world where she is recognized with others and gains a sense of presence turns into a nightmare and begins to threaten the real world. This book is at once a suspenseful thriller and a coming-of-age story about the protagonist's deep inner growth.

Learning about the world of animals just became as easy and fun as reading a comic book!

Jeanie is special. She can step into any kind of world through her imagination, shout "STOP!" and freeze everything for five minutes, and talk with and make all the animals of the world talk too. From backyard cuckoo nests to the lush amazon rainforest, Jeanie explores the wonderful and fascinating world of animals, simply by falling into her imagination. But even more is revealed and told about the animal kingdom for thanks to Jeanie, it is the animals who do the talking. 'STOP!' is a series that captures major topics in animal behavior and ecology, through the artless eyes of bright and imaginative Jeanie.

STOP! is a series of children's science books created by two brothers, one a wild primate researcher and the other an artist. The brothers grew up in various natural environments, observing nature and raising animals. As adults, they turned their favorite animal stories into illustrated books for children. Volumes 1 through 5 deal with animal behavior, while 6 through 9 cover environmental ecology.

This book begins with the question, "What if we stopped time at the precise moment when a lynx is about to pounce on a rabbit to listen to each side of the story?" What if we could communicate with animals? Wouldn't it be great if we could ask them directly about their strange and weird behavior? These familiar questions we've all had as children are answered in this book. The story begins with Jeanie, a girl with a special ability to communicate with animals. While traveling, Jeanie meets a variety of animals, including a cuckoo, vervet monkey, sea otter, lizard, bluefin tuna, chimpanzee, manatee, reindeer, and polar bear. The animals tell Jeanie about how they live and how changes in the natural environment affect them.

This book uses complete sentences, accessible vocabulary, and humorous illustrations to tell a scientific story. The sophisticated illustrations, verging on a style reminiscent of graphic novels, paint animals in a humorous, yet realistic light, and unfamiliar animals, such as the lynx, moose, and mandrill, are presented together with photographs to grab the attention of children.

With a belief that all life is beautiful, the authors wanted to give a voice to every animal. They wanted to convey how the actions of humans, whether for food or convenience, affect nature and animals. This book provides readers an opportunity to think about what nature and the environment mean to humans and how animals and people can coexist in harmony.
